內容摘要：

One day Rosy said, "Today is moving day. I'm going to find myself a whole new house." So she packed up her blanket and her pillow, and her books and toys, and all her favourite things...and started looking. And before long she finds the perfect house in the hollow of a little tree. Rosy sets about making it neat and tidy, and, when everything is perfect, she looks through her spyglass far, far away to see if any visitors are coming. And there they are - Rosy's visitors; fairies and animals, children and pipers, all dancing along to come and have a splendid feast and party with her!

What do you do when the moon comes to your window and offers to take you on a night ride? You say yes, of course! And so begins a night of surprising travel, seated on the back of the full moon. The simple, quietly humorous text offers sound advice to any child about to set off on a trip. And the soft pastel drawings add a dreamlike quality to the story of this lucky young boy who is whisked from his bed for a night ride through the city that never sleeps.
